A COMMON PURPOSE

Whoever is not against us is for us.

The process of allowing things to coalesce differs fundamentally from coralling or controlling. Coalescence speaks of natural affinities, a movement toward meeting and merging that we recognize when people fall in love, when political groundswells become apparent, when families reconvene around a loss, recognizing a level of relationship that underlies the fissures and divergences of adult life. We gather, but in a deeper sense, we are gathered. Something draws us together for at least the one brief shining moment that reminds us we were put on the planet for a common purpose. And the calling continues.

The ecumenical vision is one of coalescence. If a divided church is to come together after centuries of theological opposition, it will surely be a result not only of the efforts and intentions of those who organize conferences and write books, but of the force that summons us all toward the final unity we proclaim when we sing "We are one in the Spirit," and pray "that our unity may one day be restored."

The movement toward the center is happening as surely as entropy. What has scattered will be gathered, in due time. Maybe not in our lifetimes; we are here only for a short part of a long process. But to see history and our own lives in terms of a deep dynamic of coalescence is to recognize how "centering" godly work is, how "centering prayer" opens us to coalescence, and how much of our best participation may not be paddling madly, but floating on the currents that take us all home.

STEWARDSHIP REFLECTIONS Working Toward a Common Goal

Num 11:25-29/ Jas 5:1-6 / Mk 9:38-43, 45, 47-48

"...we tried to prevent him because he does not follow us." In today's Gospel, the disciples see a man driving out demons in the name of Jesus, and they ask him to stop because he isn't "one of them." First of all, there is jealousy and rivalry in this comment. As we read last week, there is no room for those traits in the heart of a true disciple. Secondly, they said "he does not follow us." The pronoun us (rather than you) indicates that in some ways, they have elevated themselves to being equal to Jesus. Clearly, they are still struggling with the lesson of "the first shall be last." Jesus settles this by stating that the man should be allowed to continue his work, and that if he isn't against us, then he is for us. Here is an important lesson for you and I! How often do we grow self-righteous in our own piety or our own faith and come to the conclusion that our own discipleship is stronger than another person's? Our goal is unification with all those who are "not against us," regardless of status or denomination. Missionary discipleship gains momentum when we realize we are all working toward a common goal!
