WORDS FOR TODAY

In Eastern Europe, in the nations that have recently seen changes [after the fall of communism], we observe people who are overjoyed by their newfound freedom. Beside them, however, others are frightened and disillusioned, depressed at the collapse of their ideals. We read on some faces threats of retaliation, revenge, even hatred.

Let us stop to think: what would Jesus say if he appeared among them? We can be certain: he would still speak today, as he did in his time, of love. He would say: "Love one another as I have loved you" (John 15:12). Only together, in harmony and in forgiveness, can a solid future be built.

Let us move on, as if watching a series of images fading in and out, to other locations, for example, to a country of Latin America. On one side we see skyscrapers, often modern cathedrals erected to the god of consumerism, and on the other we see shantytowns . . . with abject poverty, poverty both moral and physical, and diseases of every kind.

What would Jesus say about this scene of desolation? "I told you to love one another. You did not, and see now the consequences."

And if other pictures, as in a collage, were to flash before our eyes: cities known as the richest in the world, others with the most advanced technology, and panoramas of desert wastes with men, women and children dying of hunger. What would Jesus say if he appeared in the midst of it all? "Love one another."

Or if we were to see scenes of racial strife with massacres and violations of human rights . . . Or unending conflicts like those unfolding in the Middle East? . . . Let us ask ourselves once again: what would Jesus say in the face of such tragedy? "I said that you should love one another. Love one another as I have loved you."

Yes, this is what he would say looking upon these and the gravest situations in the world here and now.

STEWARDSHIP REFLECTIONS

Alleluia! Love

Acts 14:21-27 / Ps 145:8-9, 10-11, 12-13 / Rev 21:1-5a / Jn 13:31-33a, 34-35

What can be said about love that has not already been said. As missionary disciples, we know God is love. We know Jesus loves us. We know all about how we should love God first. We know the Golden Rule, to love others as we love ourselves. In today's Gospel, Jesus says, "I give you a new commandment: love one another." This is not the same old love. It is unstructured, unplanned, uncomfortable, vulnerable, courageous—it is sacrificial—a Fr. Kapaun kind of love. It is not easy love, but it is not impossible. It is so unexpected and startling, it will not just get your attention, it will bring joy out of mourning, life out of death, order out of chaos and peace out of war. "Behold, I make all things new" John writes in today's second reading. Can you imagine the "new heaven and a new earth" John also mentions? If you are unsure where to begin, start with a smile, even that can be hard, may take practice and can surprise the Alleluia out of others!
