STEWARDSHIP REFLECTIONS

Uber Catholic

Am 6:1a, 4-7 / Ps 146:7, 8-9, 9-10 / 1 Tm 6:11-16 / Lk 16:19-3
Who can you most identify with in today's Gospel—the self-glorified Pharisee or the humble, repenting tax collector? Are you an exemplar Catholic on the outside, but on the inside, not so much? Or maybe you are "Uber Catholic"! Is that a bad thing? Only God knows for sure. If the stewardship way of life is easy and comfortable, step it up a notch! If you are not sure where you fall in the spectrum of Catholicity, a good way to assess is to review the spiritual and corporal works of mercy. Then, too, we have all the amazing lives of the Saints that we can study and imitate. God is going to meet us where we are at. He wants us to know him, to love him and to serve him in this life so we can spend eternity with him in heaven. So, whether you are Uber Catholic or struggle reciting a Hail Mary, just talk to God, and let him do the heavy lifting.

ATTENDING TO LOVE:

THE FULL CONTEXT OF AN OFFENDING PASSAGE

An embarrassment for perceptive lectors, a predicament for discerning preachers. Similarly, for those in the pews, Ephesians 5:21-33 (Tues.) seems woefully out of touch with the ideals of Christian marriage in our time. The author of this text, whether Paul or another, undoubtedly a male writing in the apostle's name, strikes a subordinate chord for wives. The directive that wives are to place themselves beneath their husbands (the literal meaning of the Greek hypotasso) reflects more the dominant patriarchal values of the Roman world than Paul's liberating proclamation in Galatians 3:28: "there is not male and female; for you are all one in Christ Jesus." What are we to make of this seismic shift in perspective from Galatians to Ephesians?

The one-sided prescription for women in Ephesians is unsettling. The transitional verse that introduces this passage: "Be subordinate to one another, out of reverence for Christ" would seem to suggest a mutuality; both husbands and wives are to be subordinate to each other. Fair enough. Yet, the subsequent verses single out wives, twice calling them to submissive to their husbands. Unfortunately, this emphasis has ruled the day throughout much of history in both religious and secular circles. It is used to justify the subjugation of the so-called "fairer sex" to one's husband, whose position is to be validated as the "head" of the marital relationship. This is an example of a cultural model being used as an analogy to make a theological point. But cultural models change—and patriarchy is rightfully, albeit slowly, being more and more challenged in many societies as well as in church teaching.

As we read further into the Tuesday's passage, women especially might smile noticing that actually most of the admonition is directed toward the husbands! Four times they are called, even commanded, to love their wives. Surpassing the other types of love portrayed by the ancient philosophers, the love husbands are to embody is to be selfless, as signaled by the word agape. This Greek term, also used for God's love and Christ's love, is the kind of sacrificial love that Christ has for the church when he "handed himself over for her."

So, what does this mean for husbands? Like Christ who gave all he had for the believers/the church, even laying down his life, husbands are to sacrifice themselves for the well-being of their wives, to nourish and cherish them. In 1 Corinthians 13, a passage often used in marriage ceremonies, Paul champions the contours of this greatest of all virtues: "Love is patient, love is kind. It is not jealous." Neither pompous nor quick tempered, love of this quality does not "seek its own interest" but rather "bears all things, believes all things, hopes all things, endures all things." Nothing less than these manifestations of love is expected from husbands toward their wives, and for that matter, from wives toward their husbands. —Florence and John Gillman
